Albert Carrier, 1 Winter St., is trying to find the owner for the colts that recently came to him. He don't want the dog.

William Ledger is home from Bates College for this week.

James H. Porter, a one time resident of this town, has been visiting friends in the two villages. He stopped with his sister, Mrs. O. B. Barrows of South Paris. Mr. Porter is living near South Paris. He was accompanied on his visit by Rodney Eastman of Dover, N. H.

Cottages by the lake are now being rented by Mr. W. Sampson. They are getting in early to avoid the rush and be sure of getting one for next summer's vacation.

J. C. Tree is trying to find the owner of some money he recently picked up on the sidewalk near the Weary Club. It was found last Saturday.

Herbert A. Rich, Dist. Deputy, and staff, will install the officers of the I. O. O. F. lodge at West Paris, Friday night, January 1.

Mount Hope Rebekah lodge will meet Friday evening, in regular session and supper will be served at 6:45 o'clock. Installation of officers will take place. Mrs. Lelia Starbird and staff from South Paris will install.

The Central Maine Power Co crew set the last pole before the cold wave and wires are being strung. From 10 to seven inches of frost was found but the diggers found nothing more serious. This is the condition on the rural lines and probably a good average for this country. Not too bad for December.

Christmas is over and the special illuminations on Main street will be removed. It was a good stunt, also the community tree at the Weary Club, and brilliant by the Central Maine Power Co. The decorations should be extended next December.

James L. Ames, Locke's Mills, is authority for the report that Harvey Norton recently got 4 1/2 acres that weighed 10 pounds. Mr. Schell has been getting good strings of fish between the railroad and semaphores. He got a dozen the other day.

Upper Stone Pond recently produced some pickerel. It was a cold day and the bait was lost. Those who present were: Elmer Packard, Roy Jordan, Wesley Day, Walter Giddens, Carl Foss and P. Y. Fogg. A dozen fish were taken. Some big ones.

Frank Bartlett has been laid up with the grip, but is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pendexter, Jr. and son, Hugh 3d of Beverly, Mass., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pendexter over Christmas.

Will Twitchell and others were startled about 5:30 Tuesday afternoon when a meteor flashed near the western horizon. The bright object was visible a few seconds then disappeared, leaving a streak of light that remained several minutes. This sky visitor was observed in several sections of the town and reported in the Wednesday morning papers.

Hat E. Eaton, principal of the Manchester, N. H. High School, wife and son, Sargent, spent the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sargent. They came and returned by auto.

A. A. Towne and family have moved from their farm to the village for the winter. They occupy the Mrs. Geo. A. Brooks house on Water street.

Bill White, Lewiston, former member of the Wearies, sent that organization a Christmas remembrance of a generous supply of tobacco with clay pipes. Bill says business is good with him.

A union watch meeting will be held at the Universalist church this Thursday evening. Religious services under the new year.

A Junior Order of Moose will be instituted Friday evening, Jan. 5. Deputy Supervisor W. A. Wiley will be present and receive a large charter list for the obligation. Meeting will be held in Morse Hall, all applicants should be present at 7:30. Daniel F. Duller has been chosen by the supporters to act as governor of the new order. A buffet lunch will be served and a social hour enjoyed.

Shirley Wiley of Naples spent Christmas and several days following with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Wiley and aunt, Mrs. Edward Sharon and Mrs. Leon Kimball.

An interesting meeting of Lake Temple Pythian Sisters will be held Tuesday evening, Jan. 5.

Mr. O. B. Tracy is spending this week with her parents in New Hampshire, N. H.

Will Twitchell of Fore street reported seeing a flock of four ducks flying southward on Monday. Apparently the fowl enjoyed open water to a late date and have been literally frozen out.

Carney Sweeney, a native of Ireland, was in town Tuesday. His business is running over the country, working as odd jobs for a while, but since the winter is his principal occupation. He slept in the jail at South Paris, Monday night, where application had been made for supper and lodgings. The visitor spoke of the jailer, Verne Walton. Several years ago he was a guest there and in the mean time has crossed the continent via freight trains, automobiles and shanty cars. The weather is getting uncomfortable and the hiker is headed toward Florida along the coast route.

The Christmas dance in the Opera House Friday night attracted about eighty couples. Shaw's orchestra provided good music and the merry time continued until midnight. These dances are an annual affair conducted by Howard Shaw and Giles Frost. Refreshments were served at Stone's.

The high school gym is open to the public Wednesday evening and all may take part in athletic activities. Volley ball, basket ball, setting up exercises and stunts are under the supervision of Principal George Lord.

NOTED READER AND HARPIST TO APPEAR HERE

Edwin M. Whitney, interpreter of plays, will appear at the Congregational Church under the auspices of the Rodeout Club, Wednesday evening, January 6. He is a reader well known from coast to coast and has recently returned from engagements abroad. His repertoire includes at least seven plays and popular short story programs. Mr. Whitney has selected "Turn to the Right" for his appearance in Norway. He will impersonate twelve characters in this drama of humor, pathos and excitement dealing with the fortunes of two crooks. This is one of the most popular plays ever written and had a continuous run of two years on Broadway. The harpist, George Price, who will also appear, is a well known artist and highly recommended.

Tickets are on sale by members of the Club and a generous response is expected because the high quality of the performance should fill the church auditorium. The entertainment will be worthwhile and very interesting.

Mellie Going Strong

"Full houses are giving us good applause and the managers haven't told us to go home, so I think we must be giving satisfaction." That is the way Mellie Dunham writes this paper. He is telling the truth, too.

"We have broken into stage life and both like it and both are well." Both means Mellie and George.

"We have plenty of letters from people who want us to play for dances and banquets, but the Private Secretary says, 'No.' We had many chances to buy fiddles. Can use only one at a time and have one hence haven't bought any."

"We don't know when we shall go home, nor where we shall go from here. In the language of the British sailor, we are very much like him. 'Just eating pudding and drinking rum and let the wind blow us along.' Having a good time and enjoying it. Regards and best wishes to all."

BOWLING

C. J. Shoe Co. 1329-Norway Lions 1293
Henry Vanocut's cobbler bearded the Lions in their den recently and escaped without a scratch. Boynton's Lions were the victors after a long string of victories when defeat seemed well nigh impossible. Henry Vanocut's shoe makers for an attack on the jungle and made it go to the good. The cobbler's men won and tied three knots in the beast's tail. Boynton saved two trophies by cutting down the highest game and string away the cobbler. Snow at 103 was second best for the single sheet.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT AT NORWAY HIGH

The winter term opened Monday with a full program for the next few weeks. One of the important items is milk testing in which the local farmers may assist. Owners of stock may send samples of milk or cream to the department and a free test will be made and returned. The work will be done by the juniors and supervised under the supervision of the instructor, E. H. Brown.

For two weeks the seniors will make a general study of farm forestry, emphasis being placed on the farm wood lot. Tree growth and care of the lot for greatest production will be considered.

Types of corn, potatoes and wheat with uses as to the product is considered by the freshmen. They also have shop work in the wood shop.

Miss Lillian Powers of Brunswick is visiting friends in town.

Arthur L. Pinkham

The subject of the above notice departed this life, Tuesday evening, Dec. 22, at the Central Maine General Hospital, after an illness of two days. He had been found at his regular work during the previous week and returned home Saturday night, apparently in perfect health, but during the evening complained of not feeling well. However, as he experienced no pain or extreme suffering, little thought was given to his condition at the time. Later, his condition grew worse so rapidly that a physician was called and Tuesday morning he was rushed to the hospital and an operation was immediately performed, and but little hope was entertained for his recovery.

From the first, and he passed away about 9 p. m.

He was the oldest child of Nathan O. and Edith (Andrews) Pinkham, born in Casco, Me., Nov. 30, 1874. During the earlier years of his life he made his home in Bolser's Mills but was engaged in various occupations in different towns in the State, and about fourteen years ago engaged with the N. E. Tel. and Tel. Co., as teamster. This position he held as long as his work was done with horses, when he was transferred to the telephone, he enlisted as its driver and continued in that capacity until he was taken ill. He had been a member of Crooked River Grange for nearly 30 years.

April 27, 1923, he married Agnes Caswell Adams of Livermore and lived in Livermore until May 24, 1925, where he purchased and fitted up his snug and pretty little home in Bolser's Mills, and moved to Livermore. About a month ago, he moved to Lewiston temporarily for the winter. Mr. Pinkham was a man who was universally liked and respected by everybody he came in contact with. His kind consideration of others, at all times, his courteous and genial manner, his strict adherence to honesty in all his business dealings, and his high character, were among his associates in his every day work. He was honored because of his reliability and sterling qualities as a man.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his widow, Mrs. Agnes Pinkham, his father, N. O. Pinkham and a sister, Annie Pinkham Crockett, of Cornish, and one sister, Miss Agnes Pinkham, of South Paris, and a brother, R. E. Pinkham, of South Paris. Waterford, besides numerous distant relatives and a multitude of friends.

The funeral services were held at his late home in Bolser's Mills, conducted by Rev. C. W. Turner, Dec. 21. Interment in Lakeside Cemetery at Bretton's Mills.

"Been here 13 years," said E. L. Puck and today is the first time he has been out of work, not a job in sight. Can attend to fishing through the ice."

Some two hundred birds of different kinds have been or claimed to be seen about Elmer Packard's pointer the past season. Some bunch of game!

Beginning Monday, Jan. 4th, the L. M. Lowrey and Son store will close Monday evening at 6 p. m. and give a good commission. Harry Lowrey: "Tell the folks to keep cool ashes off the streets. We can use them in the corn and in winter ashes under the streets and sidewalks so they don't freeze."

Norway High School

Night school opened Monday, December 28, with more than fifty enrolled. The subjects taught are bookkeeping, typewriting, business English, shorthand, mathematics, Americanization and agriculture. Miss Adeline DeCoster, bookkeeping and typewriting; Miss Helen Goven, business English and shorthand; Albert Towne, mathematics; Edward Brown, agriculture. The classes meet Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from seven-fifteen to nine-fifteen at the high school building. A great amount of enthusiasm and interest has been shown by the students in the subjects in supporting this evening school.

The senior class met on Tuesday to choose the senior committee. Those elected are Harry Walker, chairman; Halie Parker, secretary; Howard DeCoster and Clayton White.

The typewriting students began this week to conduct sales of sandwiches at the building at noon. If the plan develops successfully, these sales will be held one or two days each week. The proceeds will be used to buy rhythm records for the typewriting lessons.

The seniors have chosen "The Time of His Life" for their play. It will be presented March 12. Miss Ada Reed head of the English department, with the help of some members of the senior committee, will select the cast and in the preparing of the parts. After the parts are learned, Harold Anderson will finish coaching.

Students from Portland addressed the high school on Tuesday, on the subject of thrift. The opportunity has been offered the school to start a Savings Bank. This bank would be conducted by the students of the school and the members of the school would be encouraged to save some money each week and deposit it in the school bank. At the end of the month, the money on hand would be transferred to the Norway Savings Bank. Mrs. Stevens stated some very interesting figures in regard to the subject of saving. She stated that nineteen out of every one hundred persons who reach the age of sixty-five are not self-supporting. This means that they must be supported by charity or by children or families. Eighty-three out of every one hundred persons leave at death, no estate. This means no provision for those left behind. In the year 1923 over eight million dollars was spent in the United States on funerals and over eight million for mourning and over one million on cremation. Over six million for candy and chewing gum; and over one million on a hundred million dollars spent for tobacco. The object of the School Savings Bank will be to instill the saving habit of saving early in life, and reduce the unsatisfactory statistics given above.

Mr. Earl R. Clifford had for holiday guests his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Clifford of Old Orchard.

Miss Glenna Knight, who teaches in the Brook, N. H., is home for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Butts' dinner guests Christmas Day were Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Poiry and children of West Paris. Mr. Butts' dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. Murphy and Winona Oliver.

The Old-Time Fiddlers

Written for the Norway Advertiser
By Martha Maxim, Cambridge, Mass.

Now that public interest is largely centered in the town of Norway and particularly in the village of Crockett, because of the notable achievement of one of its own citizens, it is not surprising that the old-time fiddlers and old-fashioned dance music, which has followed this episode of intense human interest, to learn of the various experiences which have befallen a "fiddle fiddler" from Maine, and the general reception, by worded these old-fashioned circumstances and in many lands.

Unfortunately, however, the before-mentioned old time fiddler appears to be the only one of his kind, consequently less picturesque and interesting, especially as most of the incidents here related occurred on the way from Paris, Maine, to Paris, France.

On one voyage across, most of the passengers were English people, returning to their home land from the World's Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which was held in Canada, and among them was the then world president of that distinguished organization. At each crossing of an English steamship a concert or other entertainment is given by the passengers for the benefit of the families of the British seamen. When approached by the above mentioned number for the program, she was informed that all music was barred under an avian law of the hold of the vessel. She insisted, however, that she could supply the deficiency, and was assured that only Yankee fiddlers, reels and hornpipes were available at that time from that quarter. "Splendid!" she exclaimed, "but who will play my accompaniment without music?" she asked. "I will," was the delighted reply. Being a thorough musician with all her other gracious attributes, she required but a few minutes rehearsal to familiarize her with the chords belonging to Fisher's Hornpipe and Mouse Musick, which, it is needless to mention, she had never heard of before. She captured the audience and nothing would satisfy but an adjournment to the ball room where all hands—and feet—tripped to the light fantastic to their heart's content. That circumstance cemented a friendship that endured through the years and gained an invitation to her home in Derbyshire, England.

At another stop on the way, a musicale was given at the home of a distinguished officer of the British army, in the Land of the Bluebell and Heather, evidently for the purpose of exploiting a young woman who had been widely heralded as a most wonderful violinist. When she had performed several high sounding sections, the host announced that "We have with us from 'The States' a guest who will now favor us with some of the 'folk tunes' of America." When the applause, which greeted the performance of "Hull's Victory" and the "Arkansas Traveler," had subsided, the first named performer generously applauded and expressed admiration for music that she put mine in the shade, as she expressed it.

Another notable instance was a reception at the home of a titled inventor and scientist in London (who, by the way, was born in Maine), where many of the guests were not far removed from royalty, and where the writer, as a guest of the house was called upon to play for their entertainment. After giving several selections from Bach and Beethoven, the host suggested some of the "tunes" previously played for him, one of which he characterized as "that State of Maine Hoedown." Needless to say, that number "brought down the house" and also the whole company to their feet. Lords and Ladies included, which goes to show that the old-fashioned music has an appeal all its own to all classes, whether denizens of the humbler of our New England farmhouse kitchens, or the sumptuous drawing rooms of the elite in the world's most famous metropolis of Old England.

Another occurrence was in the famed capital of France, "Paris," where a company of students had gathered to bid farewell to one of their number—the "fiddler," who was to depart on the morrow for other lands and other climes. Among them was a prima donna, who has since become world famous, and a sculptor, now of national wide fame, besides many other artists, musicians, architects, etc., of more or less celebrity.

In the course of the evening, a young man, obviously originally from some obscure New England town, announced that he "would now enjoy a kitchen breakfast." They all stared and wondered what it could be, but they soon found out, for when the strains of Soldiers' Joy and Portland Faneel fell from the fiddle and the bow, they all "fell for it" and soon all hands were gaily prancing in mazes of old fashioned dancing, efficiently prompted by the above mentioned young man.

While a guest at a fashionable summer hotel in the White Mountains, New Hampshire, a conspicuous figure was a pompous individual styled as the "Multi-Millionaire from Gotham," who was by himself and declined to mingle with ordinary humans.

While the orchestra was playing for dancing one evening, he approached the proprietor, much to the astonishment of that august personage, with the request that he ask the leader if he could play Old Zip Cooon. He could not, so the landlord ventured the information that "we have a guest in the house who perhaps would be gracious enough to play it for him." She was, and was rewarded with profuse thanks and compliments, though no explanation of this unusual request was forthcoming, but we can all read between the lines.

No, there was no romance resulting from this unusual happening, more's the pity, and with the exception of a large box of expensive confections and a gorgeous bouquet of hot house roses, received after the departure of said mysterious individual, the incident was closed. Many other instances could be cited, such as requests from the societies of the Sons of Maine, Daughters of Maine, D. A. R., etc., who seemed gratified to have as invited visitor one who could bring back memories of the Long Ago, so they might renew their youth, as it were, in the rhythm of old time dances.

Personally, even with the background of study at a famous Parisian Conservatory of Music, these folk tunes of childhood and early youth have never lost their charm. But one more episode stands out in memory as the most surprising of all these reminiscences. While touring that picturesque and romantic Land of the Shamrock and Shamrock, a visit was made to the Vale of Awea, at the Loaves of Killarney, immortalized by Thomas Moore in his poem: "The Melody of the Waters."

There was no in this visit worth as sweet as that vale in whose bosom the bright waters flow. Oh! the last rays of fading life must drive the broom of that valley shall fade from my breast. Sweet vale of Awea how calm and free I see in that bosom of shade with the friends I love best. Where the storms that we feel in this cold world should ease. And our hearts, like the waters, be mingled in peace.

Children's Diseases and How to Prevent Them

Care Should Be Taken to Stop the Spread of Any Disease

A child who is to grow and develop normally requires plenty of good food, sleep, exercise and out of door life. In addition special care must be devoted to the prevention of any illness for any illness, however slight, is a hindrance to growth, and even a short period of illness means some loss to him and may result in permanent impairment to some organ or function of his body. Therefore the old idea that a child is destined to have the children's diseases and consequently there should be no methods employed to prevent them is an old-fashioned, false idea. Children should be kept from having them and under no condition should any mother let her child be exposed to a disease intentionally. To expose a child intentionally is just like giving some poison to him for it is dangerous both to the child and to the other children in the community.

It has been proven that many of the defects and weaknesses of children have resulted from some of the children's diseases. Measles often leaves defects in the eye, and perhaps weakens the eyes. In fanile paralysis affects the limbs and often makes cripples of the innocent victims. Whooping cough may result in congestion of the lungs which in turn may easily develop into tuberculosis. Children and small rox leave up scars on the body. Scarlet fever, diphtheria, influenza, mumps, pneumonia and typhoid fever may all leave some form of defect in the body which may seriously impair the health of the child. Last, but by no means least, is the common cold and sore throat. How prevalent is this disease. (Gross, it is a disease, and how often it is done to prevent it from spreading from one member of the family to another! And yet how serious it can be. Frequent colds weaken the body and make it susceptible to tuberculosis. Just as much care should be taken of the child who has a cold as of the one who has whooping cough!

The Symptoms
The symptoms vary with the disease so that no definite ones can be put down which will hold true in all cases. As soon as any disturbance or sign of illness is noted in a child, the advice of a physician is the best thing to do. If there is a call to the office or a call of the physician to the home of the child, the State Department of Health of Maine at Augusta, will send leaflets which have the symptoms, causes, treatment and other information about all the different diseases, to anyone asking for them. (Send to the Department and ask for the reference list of the blains, croup, and leaflets about disease and sanitation. Then from this list you can check the leaflets you want and the department will send them to you.)

What Causes Disease?
Diseases are caused in two ways. Through some defect in the functioning of the body, and by germs. To the first class belong anemia, diabetes, etc. The other class includes all the contagious diseases which are caused by taking germs from the body. These diseases have their particular germ. It is by the communication of these germs that children catch diseases. The forms of communication of disease may arise in various ways. The most common is direct contact, children suffering with the disease. Children who are suffering with some disease as whooping cough, chicken pox, or colds, are often allowed to play with other children. This is a grave mistake on the part of the mother, for in leaving the children out in public, the other children are exposed through contact with the child. Great care should be taken to keep the child away from the other children, and the handkerchiefs and clothing that the child uses, for they easily communicate the disease to anyone who comes in contact with them.

If the children get the disease from some unknown cause. When this is the case, the chances are that he became exposed to it through germs which were in the air or through infection from food which he had eaten. Germs do not always get into the body through the air, for sometimes they may enter through the food or water. Tuberculosis is many times caused through infected milk which the child drank. This is the chief argument why milk should be inspected before it is sold. In the case of typhoid fever, the cause may be through infected or polluted drinking water. Throwing water leads to the argument for sanitary conditions around the home.

Prevention of the Spread of Disease
The first thing to do to prevent or check the spread of disease is to isolate the child who has a cold and keep him home from school. So many of the children's diseases start with a cold that many times the child may be coming down with one when he is suspected of having only a cold.

If any child or adult is suspected of having a disease he should be kept away from other people for a few days or until the physician lets him go free. This may not mean shutting him up in a room if he is not ill, but it means that he should not come in contact with other people or where there are. In this way if he does have the disease he has not exposed others as he would if he had gone to school or to work.

If a child has the disease he should be kept apart from the rest of the family in a room by himself. No one but the person who was waiting on him should be allowed to enter the room until the doctor so ordered. The dishes which are taken to the sick room should be thoroughly sterilized or boiled when they are brought from the sick room. No food or clothing coming from the sick room should be touched by anyone but the nurse. Bedding, etc., should be boiled.

Nowadays the doctor notifies the health officer of any diseases in a community and he in turn puts a quarantine on the houses or rooms where the diseases are. The family should not feel antagonistic toward him for he is helping them to check the disease.

Vaccination is the most common prevention of certain diseases. Many states there is a law that all children must be vaccinated when they enter school. This is an excellent law, for not only does it prevent the child from getting the disease, but it also prevents any epidemic from arising in the community. May the time come when the compulsory vaccination laws will be in effect in every state.

In the case of epidemics in a school, the authorities generally close the schools. If this is the case, the parents should cooperate with them in preventing the spread of the disease, by keeping the children home. If when school is closed, the children still are allowed to play together there is still the danger of the spread of the disease and the school may be better to keep the school open.

Two or three times a week the school buildings, halls, etc., should be thoroughly fumigated with fresh chlorine. Little ones, after illness in a home, should be cleaned and in case of contagious diseases, should be fumigated.

Keep children away from others who have a disease.

Keep other children in the family from getting it if one already has it.

Conquer with the school officials to prevent epidemics.

Keep the child having the disease isolated.

Be sure that the water and milk is not infected.

Teach the child not to cough, sneeze, spit, etc., except in a cloth or such.

Keep the child who has a cold at home for several days until you are sure that he will not carry it to other children.

Fire in Hebron Laboratory

Loss of $2,000 in Tuesday Morning Blaze

The chemical laboratory together with its contents at Hebron Academy, was destroyed by fire at about 9:15 Tuesday morning at a loss of about $2,000. The old laboratory which was about 40 feet behind the Academy building had had a new furnace installed. It had been painted, shingled and new cement steps made. Fire caught in the basement supposedly near the furnace—just how is not known. The school is closed for the Christmas recess, but workmen in one of the buildings nearby discovered the blaze and promptly sounded the alarm. Townspeople came to help. Chemists were employed. The volunteers were hampered somewhat because of a frozen hydrant, but succeeded in keeping the flames confined to the one building. As Principal Hunt was away, and the larger number of the faculty, it was impossible to find out the insurance on the building.

Poultry Profits

How to Increase Them

How to increase poultry profits is told in a bulletin released by the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture. This latest publication, written by M. D. Jones, Farm Management Specialist, and O. M. Wilbur, Poultry Specialist.

For the last ten years, and more especially during the last few years, poultry has been one of the better paying farm enterprises in Maine. Many farmers, who have made a careful analysis of their business, through the use of farm accounts, have found that on a general farm, a flock of around 200 hens has added materially to their labor income. Unsatisfactory returns and severe losses in poultry have been experienced, largely as a result of improper management. The purpose of this bulletin is to show from records that have been kept on farm flocks in Maine, the results secured from keeping hens under various conditions and from handling them by different methods.

The records that were kept, covered the three year period, November 1, 1921, to October 31, 1924. The number of farmers keeping them each year was, first year, 183, second year, 147, third year, 212, a total of 542 yearly records. They were kept in an account book, furnished by the Extension Service. Each month, the record was summarized and an itemized statement of expenses and receipts was forwarded to the Extension Office, where a yearly summary of each record was prepared. Reports covering conditions under which the flock was kept and the method used in handling it, supplemented the monthly reports. A inventory of the stock and poultry equipment was furnished at the beginning and end of each year's account.

These flocks represented all conditions from those losing net losses to those with good profits, from flocks averaging as low as 48 eggs per hen to some that averaged 193. Both small and large flocks were included. Fifty-two percent of them were over one hundred hens per flock, but only five per cent were over four hundred.

The following are a few of the things taken up in this bulletin, which contains accurate information gathered from flocks right here in Maine: labor return per hen, costs and returns per hen, flock replacement, monthly production and average price, factors which influence egg production and labor return, pullets pay better than old hens, pullets' eggs average higher price, producing good pullets, brooding the chicks, developing the flock healthily, culling increased average production, artificial lighting, which is the best breed, number of hens per farm and labor returns, method of marketing eggs, broilers, roasters and capons, keeping alive or dressed, records and accounts good guides, possibilities of poultry in Maine.

Copies of this bulletin will be sent free to any address, upon request to the Extension Service, College of Agriculture, Orono, Maine.

WHAT IS A HABIT?

"Habit" is such a common, everyday sort of term, with which everyone is more or less familiar, that it hardly seems necessary to discuss it at all. However, it is in this very fact, that habits are so commonplace and ordinary in the minds of the great mass of individuals that the danger lies. All too frequently the fundamental importance of forming right habits in early life is minimized or overlooked altogether.

Without any attempt to give a strictly scientific definition, it may be said that habit is the tendency to repeat an act which has been done before. One develops and only habits of acting, but habits of thinking and feeling in certain ways. Habits in regard to the care of the body, eating, sleeping, eliminating, are easily formed and vitally effect health. Our manners are a collection of habits; we do a rude or a courteous thing almost without stopping to think. If we did not learn muscular movements which become habitual through repetition, we could never play a piano, run a typewriter, or gain skill in athletics.

Of course, children must learn the simpler movements first, the use of knife and fork, the buttoning of buttons, the tying of knots. The morals of most of us are, to a large extent, the results of the habits of thinking formed in early life, our attitude toward the drinking of alcoholic liquors, or the taking of other's property, or the problem of sex, as well as our attitude toward other people, whether we are or desirable friends and antagonists. Most of our prejudices are the outcome of habits of thinking formed in childhood. Many persons as children, develop a feeling about racial and religious differences, which may lead, in later life, to intolerance and hatred toward their fellowmen. This same attitude of mind is seen in children toward their playmates, who have the misfortune of being orphans, or a child whose mother is a scrubwoman, or whose father is a garbage collector, or who is boarded under the care of a child-placing agency. Care should be taken to see that children are early taught kindness and consideration for those less fortunate, for unconsciously they will form their attitudes from the home atmosphere.

Teach children to be kind—One of the most important things to teach children is to take good care of their household pets; to remember to feed them and to give them water to drink at regular times if possible. We are only too ready if we treat every living creature as we would wish to be treated ourselves. If you drive a horse, think how you would like to be treated if you were that horse. Treat your dog and cat as you would like to be treated if you could change places with them. Kindness on the farm—gentle treatment of cows; good bedding, good food and a safe large enough to lie down in, for the horse; shelter for the swine; proper food and care of poultry all repay the farmer in dollars and cents. Try it.

Stopped all Traffic—In New York a back alley cat decided to move her family of five kittens across the street. She was so well known that Officer Oudmore stopped all traffic and motor cars while she carried the five kittens safely across. The world pauses sometimes when the American sense of kindness is appealed to.
